“Sling TV is synonymous with live television, and whether America craves pigskins or politics, these two events on Monday night represent the pinnacle of must-see-live TV”

ENGLEWOOD, Colo., Sep 23, 2016--In anticipation of Monday evening's two big events—the first Presidential debate of the 2016 election season and pro football faceoff between New Orleans and Atlanta—Sling TV is hosting the first ever 18-hour free preview of its Sling Orange service, with no credit card required. New Sling TV customers only need to provide a valid email address and password to try the live, over-the-top television service on their TVs, tablets, game consoles, computers, smartphones and other streaming devices in or out of the home.

“Sling TV is synonymous with live television, and whether America craves pigskins or politics, these two events on Monday night represent the pinnacle of must-see-live TV,” said Roger Lynch, CEO of Sling TV. “This preview is one hundred percent free and gives all Americans the opportunity to watch the first Presidential debate and more; I can't think of a better night to welcome new Sling TV viewers to experience our service.”

New Sling TV customers can sign up for this special free preview starting today by visiting www.sling.com/watchfree. Those who sign up for the free preview will receive access to all Sling Orange core service programming, including pre- and post- debate coverage, beginning 8 a.m. ET Monday, September 26. The free preview period will end at 2 a.m. ET Tuesday, September 27.
